Biography

Grada Kilomba (b. 1968, Lisbon, Portugal) is an interdisciplinary artist and writer living in Berlin – with roots in São Tomé e Príncipe, Angola, and Portugal. Her work draws on the repressed history of colonialism and its legacy on memory, trauma, gender, and the conceptualisation of knowledge and narrative: ‘who can speak?’ ‘what can we speak about?’ and ‘what happens when we speak?’ Are three constant and fragile questions in Kilomba’s body of work on decolonisation.

She is best known for her subversive writing and her unconventional use of artistic practices, in which she ‘gives body, voice and image to her own writings’, and brings texts into performance – using a variety of formats from video installations, to staged readings, to performances, text collage, and sound installations. In her work, Kilomba intentionally creates a hybrid space between the academic and artistic languages, and storytelling is central to her decolonising practices, then she ‘decolonises it by subverting content, undoing standard practices – and inventing new methods and places of expression’. Her work has been described to have the powerful beauty of touching ‘the colonial wound’ with a surgical precision and simultaneously of creating an inspiring and refreshing poetry of formats, ‘bringing a new, experimental and compelling voice to contemporary art and discourse’ (ARTEBrasileiros 2016).

Her work has been presented at renowned venues and events, such as Documenta 14 in Kassel 2017, 32. Bienal de São Paulo 2016, Rauma Biennial Balticum 2016, Art Basel 2016, Transmediale, Secession Museum in Vienna, Bozar Museum in Brussels, Maritime Museum in London, SAVVY Contemporary in Berlin, Cape Town Art Fair 2017, Wits Theatre in Johannesburg, Theatre Müncher Kammerspiel in Munich, Maxim Gorki Theatre in Berlin, among others.

In 2017-2018, she presented two major solo exhibitions in her home country of Portugal for the first time – The Most Beautiful Language (curated by Gabi Ngcobo) at Avenida da Índia Gallery, at the Municipal Galleries of Lisbon and Secrets to Tell, MAAT – Museum of Art, Architecture and Technology, Lisbon.

Kilomba studied Clinical Psychology and Psychoanalysis at the ‘ISPA – Instituto Superior de Psicologia Aplicada’ in Lisbon. There, she worked in the psychiatry department with war survivors from Angola and Mozambique. Strongly influenced by the work of Frantz Fanon, Kilomba started writing, and developing projects on memory and trauma, extending her concerns to form, language, performance, and the staging of post-colonial narratives. Recognised for her academic excellence, she received a Ph.D. fellowship from the German Heinrich Böll Foundation, and moved to Berlin, where she attained a Doctorate in Philosophy (summa cum laude) from the Freie Universität Berlin 2008.

Since 2004, she has been lecturing at several international universities, and last, was a Full Professor at the Humboldt Universität Berlin, department of Gender Studies (2012 – 2013), where her series on Performing Knowledge became particularly known, as well as, her works Bodies Without Shame and Tongues Without Shame.

She is the author of Plantation Memories (2008), a compilation of episodes of everyday racism written in the form of short psychoanalytical stories; and the co-editor of Mythen, Subjekt, Masken (2005), an interdisciplinary anthology on critical whiteness studies. In 2010, as part of her Performing Knowledge series, Kilomba started bringing theoretical and political texts into stage, exploring the visualisation of ‘silenced voices’ and ‘uncomfortable knowledge’, with a fixed ensemble of actors, and presented her work at various international theatre venues. More recently, she extended her work into visual arts and installation, and started experimenting with film, video, and sound, introducing another performative element to her writings.

Since 2015, she was invited by the Maxim Gorki Theatre, in Berlin, to develop the artist talk series ‘Kosmos<sup>2</sup>’, a political intervention in the contemporary arts in collaboration with refugee artists.

Kilomba performs and exhibits her artworks internationally and is represented by Goodman Gallery in South Africa.
